Sun Mountain ClubGlider

$259; sunmountain.com

The 14.5-pound ClubGlider virtually eliminates the hassle of toting sticks through an airport. The bag rolls as smoothly as a baby stroller on retractable aluminum legs and pivoting wheels. The leg system locks into place during travel and the entire unit folds in half when not in use. Thick padding through the upper portion provides protection for full-size golf bags.

SKLZ Gyro Swing

$219; sklz.com

If you're a chronic slicer, swing the club and feel the gyroscope inside the clubhead exaggerate the sensation of proper clubhead rotation. The trick, naturally, is to transfer this feel to the swings you make with your own clubs. One shortcoming: The gyroscope makes a loud sound (like an airplane taking off) that could prove disruptive to others on the practice range or in your bedroom.

Ahead X-Cap

$25; aheadweb.com

X-Cap looks like your standard golf cap, but a discreet retractable cord holds regular eyeglasses, or sunglasses, in place. This prevents glasses from shifting on your face, or falling off the brim of the cap, while you swing. The eyeglass attachment is removable as well. X-Cap comes in white, red, navy, black or white/navy.
